is pleased to host a FREE Credit Education Course on:

Thursday, June 28th 2018 6:30pm-8:30pm

DESCRIPTION: The Program Sponsor is Birchwood Credit Services, Inc. This is an introduction for consumers to understanding FICO scores currently used by the majority of mortgage lenders in determining consumer credit worthiness. The course explores how credit reports are developed, how FICO credit scores are calculated, and what data is used in determining a consumer's credit score. Instruction is provided on the proper steps involved in correcting erroneous credit data contained in a consumer credit file. The focus of the course is on useful, hands-on practical applications used by credit grantors to assist the consumer in maximizing their FICO scores through use of internet based software tools. Because many consumers have FICO scores that are artificially lower than they should be due to inaccurate information data in their credit files and because mismanagement of the credit data contained in their credit file particular attention is paid to personalized credit management. This course will assist the consumer in understanding the importance of credit score optimization in the current marketplace and how to use the available optimization systems to help better educate consumers.
